INTRODUCTION.

THE Church of the Holy Trinity or Christ Church, Cork, occupies the site of one of the two ancient Parish Churches, once within the City walls. It was also called the 'King's Chapel,' and is mentioned as the Church of the Holy Trinity in the Decretal Epistles of Pope Innocent III., in the year 1199, and is rated in the Taxation of Pope Nicholas in 1291 at fifteen marks. It was situated about 120 feet within the East wall of the City, and beside it was the College of Christ Church, long since removed. The Church-yard and adjacent ground was, till lately, within a few inches of the surface, a marsh, and before the year 1830 the vaults were filled with water at the rise of every tide. When the present School-houses were erected, a few years ago, a large and deep pit was discovered, in which was some cart-loads of human remains, mixed with the bones of horses, most probably deposited there after the siege of Cork by the Duke of Marlborough, Sept. 28, 1690. If we except some fragments of old walls in the crypt, no part of the ancient structure now remains. The present Church was built in 1717, and arranged internally with the present front and entrance added, by an applotment on the parish, made 6th October, 1827, for £3,500 6s., at a rate of 1s. 10d. in the pound gross valuation.

This was formerly the burial-place of some of the chief citizens of Cork, viz. :—Lombards, Terrys, Goulds, Creaughes, Sarsfields, Verdens, Whites, Mathews, Fagans, Skiddys, Roches, Ronans. Some elaborately ornamented tomb-stones of the last four families, of the 16th Century, until lately could be seen here against the North wall of the cemetery; there are also others in the crypt, but the place is so dark that identification is at present impossible. One very remarkable stone, with a human skeleton in high relief, rested very appropriately against the wall opposite the gate of the burial-ground, as if to remind those that entered there, that our life was but "a vapour," or, as the inscription told us, "the heir of worms." This was the tomb of the worshipful man, Thomas Ronan, formerly Mayor of Cork, who died 1554, and his wife, Johanna Terry.

The crypt consists of a nave, 89 ft. 9 in. long, by 17 ft. 7 in. broad, with two lateral aisles, 72 ft. 6 in. wide. The nave is separated from these aisles by walls 3 feet thick, in which are large arched openings, 8 ft. 2 in. across. In the nave is built another wall, 2 feet thick, at a distance of 5 feet 7 in. from the wall between the nave and North aisle, also pierced with openings, varying in width from 7 ft. 8 in. to 5 ft. 2 in., and which forms a sort of intermediate passage, in which is a large ancient altar-tomb with a floriated cross. A portion of this wall is built on a large block of solid masonry, evidently a remnant of the ancient Church. (See the plan of crypt.) The following inscriptions are on loose stones in the crypt, of modern times:—

IN SOUTH AISLE.

"Here lyeth interred the body of William Hodder, of the City of Corke, Alderman, who departed this life May the Eleventh, 1665, second Mayor of the said City since the Protestant Settlement of that Corporation, and the first High Sheriff for the County of Corke after the happy restoration of our Most Gracious Sovereign, King Charles the Second.

"And also here lyeth interred the body of John Hodder, of the City of Corke, Alderman, who departed this life the third day of May, 1673, and the first Mayor of the said City after the Protestant Settlement of that Corporation, and the year after High Sheriff for the County of Corke, Anno Domini 1673."

"Here lyeth interred the body of Elizabeth Fearnes, the wife of Captin Henry Fearnes, aged 40 years, deceased the 4th day of March, Anno 1674. 'I know that my Redeemer liveth.'"

"The Burial Place of Jo. Power."

MIDDLE AISLE.

"I.H.S. This is the burial place of Alderman Daniel Perdrean and his family, who departed this life the 24th day of July, 1724."

"Here lyeth the body of John Willis, who departed this life the 24th day of February, 1713, in the 21st year of his age."

"Here lyeth the body of William Massy, who departed this life the 8th day of May, Anno Domini 1755, in the 28th year of his age."

NORTH AISLE.

A part of a recumbent effigy, with the head broken off, on a slab 4 ft. 2 in. high by 2 ft. broad, and 2½ in. thick. In ancient times, this was called the "Headless Man," and was the subject of some superstitious legend, now lost.

"This is the burying place of James Dillon and his family. Here lyeth the body of William Dillon, who departed this life ye first day of August, Anno Domini 1776."

The oldest bequests to the Church of the Holy Trinity, Cork, which have been met with, are those of John Wynchedon, citizen of Cork, whose will is dated on the octave of the Apostles Peter and Paul, 1306. To the Church he leaves one mark; to each priest, 12d.; to John, clerk of said Church, 2s.; to his son, 12d.; to the fabric of the Church, half a mark, that every year a representation of the Crucifixion in wax, gilt, and five pounds in weight, should be provided for the Church, and two candlesticks for the great altar; to the Rector and Vicar, 20s., and the Portiforium (Breviary) to the Vicar, which he had in pledge for 10s. (Brit. Mus., Add. 19,868).

One Record has, however, escaped the general ruin, which seems to have befallen almost every object of the past in Cork, and though of a date but as of yesterday, when compared to what the Church ought to possess, still it is the oldest Parish Register in the Dioceses of Cork, Cloyne, and Ross, and as such deserves every consideration. Its discovery was on this wise. In August, 1857, a Mr. M'Carthy, who had been once sexton of this Church, but then absent from Cork about 20 years, mentioned to me the existence, in his time, of an old parchment Register. He said it was stolen when his father was sexton, and recovered, and that a second time it was removed with some lumber from the Church, and restored by a tobacconist to whom it was sold as waste paper with a number of old account books. This occurred about 40 years before Mr. M'Carthy left Cork. I mentioned the circumstance to the Rev. J. Conolly, then Rector, and on instituting a minute search, the missing Register was found safe and sound, with some parish books of the same period, in a "sure coffer" provided with three locks, (in conformity with the 46th Canon), in a small chamber under the organ gallery, which no person appears to have visited for many years.

This Register is on thick parchment, much discoloured; it is 17½ inches long by 7 inches broad, contains 48 folios, written by different hands, and embraces the period from 26th July, 1643, to 27th February, 1668.

With the permission of the Rev. Mr. Conolly I made a perfect transcript of this Register. The late correspondence in Notes and Queries induced me to look up my copy. I resolved, small though the contribution be, to publish this, the oldest Register in my native city or county, in extenso, in the hope that others, in whose power it may be, will do likewise.

With the view of throwing some light on parochial matters over two centuries ago in Cork, I here present the reader with extracts from the Parish Book found with this Register. These tell us to what extent our forefathers were taxed, how much they paid the minister, how they relieved the poor, helped the wayfaring man to go to his own home, how they buried their dead—for at that time the body was consigned to the earth in a shroud tied at both ends, and not in a coffin as now—leadern chests were only for the great, while the age of stone coffins, in which the consecrated ashes of Bishops and mitred Abbots used to be enshrined, had long since passed away.

From a historic point of view this Register is interesting. It contains the names of some of the officers who were killed at the battle of Knockninoss, which was fought 13th November, 1647, between the Parliamentary troops under Lord Inchiquin, and the Irish commanded by Lord Taaffe, and whose remains were subsequently brought to Cork, and interred here. If any entry in this Register will help to assist the descendants of some former citizens, now resident in distant lands, to add one missing link to their pedigrees, and once more, in imagination, breathe life into the dust that sleeps in Christ Church, Cork, the sincere desire of the writer will be fully accomplished.

For the very accurate plan of the crypt which accompanies this fasciculus, I am indebted to William R. Atkins, Esq., of the Diocesan Office, Cork.
